

Relationship Connection and Leadership

A Fundraising Webinar

About the Webinar

What does relationship connection mean, and what are its leadership benefits? How does one meaningfully and skillfully connect with important others at home and at work?

In his writings and particularly in his lived example, the eminent psychiatrist, Dr. Murray Bowen, demonstrated the importance of maintaining connection with family members and work colleagues. His clinical work led to groundbreaking principles that promote honest, open relationships and healthy emotional separateness.

The webcast, “Relationship Connection and Leadership” will explore the importance of emotional maturity as a key to healthy relationship connection within the family and workplace. Skills associated with mature connection in family and organizational leadership will be identified. Presenter John Engels will draw from his research in the Bowen archives, and evocative examples from his own family relationships and leadership coaching client interactions. Specific topics will include:

- The nature of relationship connection
- Connection benefits - in the workplace, in the family
- Connection markers
- Connection wreckers
- Two cornerstone connection skills
- Family applications and examples
- Workplace applications and examples
- Questions and dialogue featuring “live” connection challenges of attendees

All proceeds will support The Murray Bowen Archives Project.

About TMBAP

Dr. Bowen gave his theory as a gift to the world.

The history of The Murray Bowen Archives Project is the story of making that gift a reality. Shortly before Dr. Bowen’s death in 1990, it was agreed that the National Library of Medicine would serve as the repository for all of his work. Selections from these materials are now showcased on TMBAP’s website. The Murray Bowen Archives Project Board of Directors is committed to the raising of funds that will ensure Dr. Bowen’s life works are preserved and accessible to everyone.
